Canaccord Genuity Dynamic Fund - CHF suggested asset allocation (%)

Canaccord Genuity Dynamic Fund - CHF Manager's commentary

Performance: In March 2024, the Canaccord Genuity Dynamic Fund (CHF I share class) rose +2.36% compared with the Morningstar CHF Moderate Allocation of +2.57%. Year to date the Fund is up +4.31% compared with the benchmark return of +4.63%.

Asset Allocation: Over the month, equity allocations increased from 47% to 50%, with an equivalent decrease in fixed-interest exposure to 43%, with the remainder of the Fund invested 6% in gold and 1% in cash.

Fixed-Income: One of the most welcome developments this year has been the return of diversification. One of the benefits of a multi-asset approach has been the inverse relationship between stocks and bonds to build diversified portfolios. In other words, when stocks sell off, bond yields tend to fall (bond prices rise). This has tended to cushion the Fund during equity market corrections or 'risk-off' phases. Since the post-pandemic recovery this diversification effect has broken down as the correlation between bonds and equities has turned positive. This is because the market became more concerned about the persistence of inflation and the impact on interest rates. As these fears have subsided, this has allowed the negative correlation to return as bond prices have fallen whilst stocks have risen. The return of this diversification effect reflects a normalisation in the behaviour of financial markets and therefore a better environment for multi-asset investors.

Equity: The S&P500 ended the first quarter +10.16%, proving to be very resilient and moving to new record highs. The economic and earnings outlook remains very favourable. Nonetheless, rising equity valuations in the form of multiple expansions have driven 2/3 of the S&P return so far year to date. This now means that the US equity market is already discounting much of the positive outlook, with the S&P now trading on 21.1x 2024 earnings, placing it at the 89th percentile relative to its own history. While the equity market outlook remains favourable, there is very little margin of safety for investors at these elevated levels. On the plus side, while valuations do matter in the very long run, in a strong bull market the dominant factor tends to be earnings momentum. In this regard, at least the equity market is moving higher based on improving growth prospects rather than relying purely on lower interest rates to drive returns. Historically when we have experienced a period of sharp valuation expansion, the equity market has continued to rally, mainly because this was a predecessor of continued strong growth. While the S&P500 has reached many forecasters' year-end target, in an overshoot scenario, it could easily trade up to 5,800 or 6,000 by the end of the year.

Currency: With equity markets driving portfolio returns, sources of diversification become increasingly important. We have already discussed the role of fixed interest in performing this function, but the same argument can be extended to the currency portfolio. The mainstay of the currency portfolio remains the US dollar, where we continue to hold around 30% of the Fund. The US dollar tends to attract haven flows in times of trouble, but also as has been the case of late, performs well when the US economy outperforms that of the rest of the world. We also hold Swiss francs and would even consider the Japanese yen now that the interest rate cycle has turned and Japan is no longer a prisoner of negative interest rates.

Commodity: In USD, Brent oil is +13.5% year-to-date whilst gold is +8.1%, ending the month at an all-time high of US$2229.87/Oz. Both would benefit from further rate cuts as well as any potential economic revival of China, where the economy has been in the doldrums for some time. Both gold and oil have benefitted from geopolitical uncertainties this year as well as sustained buying from central banks, which are keen to diversify their reserve holdings away from the US dollar. We retain 6% in gold alongside Barrick Gold. Both Shell and TotalEnergies feature in our top 5 equity positions. Further natural resource exposure is held via Norsk Hydro, Arcelor Mittal and Glencore.
